Mr. Tim Roehl
President, Tornado Alley Turbo
300 Airport Rd
Ada, OK 74820

Dear Tim,

Recently, I had a Whirlwind II Turbonormalizing System and the associated built-in oxygen installed by you in my 1996 A36 Bonanza. I cannot begin to tell you how thrilled I am with this conversion. The plane now has Baron speed and load carrying capability with half the fuel flow. It is also much simpler to fly and to manage the engine. There is little doubt that these upgrades are unparalleled in the industry and well worth the investment.

But, my delight with your company doesn't end with the product. So, I would like to take this opportunity to also provide some comments and "kudos" to Tornado Alley on the personnel and process involved with my specific conversion.

First, when a "slot" became available, Tornado Alley sent Bilby Wallace to pick up the plane at your expense. I was more than pleasantly surprised that you would do this. It saved me a lot of time, was extremely convenient, and definitely exceeded my expectations.

Second, when you got the plane, you noticed that the air-conditioning system was not working. You trouble shot the problem and let me know what was wrong. I had been trying to find someone that could find out what was wrong for the past three summers. I have had the plane to many shops – including Beechcraft – and no one seemed to be able to find the problem. Many thanks for doing this.

Third, after the conversion, when the JPI engine analyzer failed during the first test flight before the plane was delivered back to me, John Landreth tried as hard as he could to get a new analyzer and minimize delays – even to the point of offering to purchase a second instrument from JPI. Although JPI wouldn't do this (I have no idea why) and wasn't as responsive as they could have been, everyone at Tornado Alley performed flawlessly.

Fourth, when the weather and my own personal schedule made it impossible for me to pick up the plane in Ada, OK, you had Bilby, once again, deliver it to me at your expense. This allowed me to keep a previous appointment to upgrade the avionics that had been set just a few weeks earlier. Again, these actions save me a lot of time, were extremely convenient, and exceeded my expectations

Fourth, when Bilby was flying the plane back, he noticed a leak in the oxygen system. He could have chosen to disregard the anomaly and not reported it to me. I would not have known the difference. But, he did not do that. Instead he made me well aware of the problem and told me it was Tornado Alley's responsibility to have it fixed. Although JA Air Center (my maintenance and avionics shop) found and corrected the problem, Tornado Alley paid for their services. This also shows the honesty, integrity and a true concern Tornado Alley has for its customers. I was very impressed.

Last, throughout the installation process, Dave Landreth and you kept me informed of progress with the plane. When problems occurred, I was told me about them and Tornado Alley tried to resolve them it as quickly as possible. I could not ask for more. My experience, Tim, is that everyone has a few problems when a job as big as a conversion like this takes place. It's how a company responds to these problems that really makes the difference. In my opinion, Tornado Alley gets all "A's" in this category.

In addition, all of us who fly have had far too many experiences where companies are not honest or care much about their customers as we would like them to. Many won't admit mistakes or take responsibility for them - just to make an extra dollar. Tornado Alley is definitely at the opposite end of that spectrum. I received nothing but "straight answers" and the very best of service from everyone at Tornado Alley. Many times this service far exceeded my expectations. I believe your honesty and integrity are a testament to a group of down-to-earth, honest people with a fabulous product. It is rarely seen in today's business world. I can assure you that I will provide nothing but glowing accounts of my interactions with Tornado Alley. I would like to thank you for making my experience such a great one. And please share these comments with Dave Landreth and Bilby Wallace and everyone there at Tornado Alley. You have a fabulous product but and even more fabulous team.

Sincerely
